BATHHOUSE SPA

RICHARDSON SADEKI

Las Vegas, United States | 2004

The Bathhouse spa is conceived as a pause from the bustling noise and stimulating world of Las Vegas, where this spa is located. The structure of this well-being center is inspired by the traditional Roman baths, but, unlike those, here the visitors are pampered by treatments in an exclusive environment, where privacy and serenity are the most cherished values.

Consistent with this spirit, the rooms are refined and present minimalist decor framed by spaces that are lined in black stone. The lobby is a bereft space where a row of benches stands out as an integral part of a sand-colored structure that is affixed to one of the walls.

From a few of the openings built into the wall, red color illumination highlights the slate black surfaces, generating an attractive contrasting decor that is replicated in the area of access to the elevator.

White leather seats cover part of one of the main entrance's walls.

The bereft surfaces of the lobby provide the atmosphere of privacy that was sought by this spa, which provides an oasis of serenity from the bustling noise of Las Vegas.
